

VO
SAMUEL ADAMS PROPOSES A SEEMINGLY IMPOSSIBLE TASK...

...A SIMULTANEOUS RAID ON ALL THREE SHIPS.

Adams points to various spots on the sketch, indicating areas in the cargo hold.

MONTAGE:

- WILLIAM MOLINEUX IS ON THE DOCKS, TALKING WITH TWO YOUNG MEN... THE MEN LISTEN, THEN NOD - THEY'RE IN.

IN ORDER TO WORK, THE PLAN REQUIRES
NO LESS THAN 90 ABLE BODIED MEN.
TOGETHER, THEY WILL UNLOAD THE TEA
FROM ALL THREE SHIPS...

- PAUL REVERE IS SPEAKING WITH A YOUNG BLACKSMITH... THE BLACKSMITH NODS AND SHAKES HIS HAND - HE'S IN.

...AND DUMP IT INTO BOSTON HARBOR.

It would normally take a crew of roughly fifteen experienced men almost two full days to unload the cargo from just one of these ships.
Samuel Adams figures that, with 90 men split between the boats, they can unload all the tea in a matter of hours. It's bold, it's ambitious, and above all, it's risky.
